ACC and Disclosures

ACC is committed to ensuring balance, independence, objectivity, and scientific rigor in their governance, programmatic, educational, chapter, and other activities. Fulfilling this commitment depends on member and public confidence in the College’s integrity and objectivity. The College recognizes that the activities of College members in their practice, research, and other endeavors may result in competing interests that could affect their decisions and actions. In order to safeguard the integrity of the College, the ACC has established the following guiding principles and policies to help ensure that such interests are disclosed and carefully managed.

The ACC recommends that all members disclose and manage conflicts of interest in a manner that is consistent with these policies and the ACC’s mission.

Members should disclose any financial or other interests that could reasonably be perceived as affecting the objectivity of their professional judgment. This includes, but is not limited to, financial interests in companies, partnerships, or other entities that may be involved in the same or related fields of work.

Conflicts of interest are managed through a combination of self-regulation, peer review, and public disclosure. The ACC encourages all members to take steps to minimize or eliminate conflicts of interest and to strive for the highest standards of professional conduct and integrity.

The ACC is committed to ensuring that its members maintain the highest standards of professional conduct and integrity.

research, and other volunteer and private endeavors could lead to the development of conflicts of interest. Therefore, the College has established a Disclosure Policy and conflict of interest management process as appropriate. All members involved in College governance, including all committees and task forces, programmatic, certified educational, chapter, and other activities must provide complete, timely, accurate, and signed disclosure statements. Compliance with this process is mandatory for participation in College activities.
